

THE LAST LIGHT

TGC GAME JAM — GAME PROPOSAL

Genre	Horror / Puzzle / Escape	Engine	Godot
Themes	Comic • Light • Twist	Playtime	10-15 Minutes

1. GAME CONCEPT

The Last Light is a short first-person horror escape game set inside an abandoned house. The player wakes with no memory of how they arrived. Their only tool is a flashlight with limited battery. They must explore, find items, solve puzzles, and escape while avoiding a mysterious creature.

Theme integration: Light drives exploration and survival; Comic delivers clues and memories; Twist changes the player's understanding of the entire game.

2. CORE GAMEPLAY

Explore → Use Light → Discover Clue → Find Item → Avoid Creature → Solve Puzzle → Progress

- Light ON: reveals hidden objects and clues, enables navigation and some puzzles, but lets the creature detect the player.
- Light OFF: makes the player harder to detect, but hides important clues and makes exploration difficult.

Risk / reward: “Do I turn on the light to see, knowing that something might see me?”

3. THE THREE THEMES

LIGHT	The flashlight controls visibility, puzzles, story discovery, and enemy detection.
COMIC	Comic-style panels contain dialogue, drawings, hints, memories, and effects such as “BANG!” and “RUN!”. Some appear only under the flashlight.
TWIST	Records reveal ATTEMPT #01, #17, #32 and #46. The player realizes the journey has happened before and their memories are reset each time.

Example: A blank wall becomes a comic panel when illuminated: “DON'T TRUST THE LIGHT.” The panel disappears when the player moves away.

4. STORY

The player wakes in a dark bedroom. A message reads “DON'T LET THE LIGHT DIE.” They find the flashlight and explore. Hidden comic panels reveal strange warnings while the creature reacts to the flashlight.

Near the end, evidence of previous attempts appears: ATTEMPT #01 • #17 • #32 • #46. The player discovers that the creature is connected to those previous attempts and that they have been repeating the same journey.

Final comic panel: “YOU HAVE BEEN HERE BEFORE.”

5. LEVEL STRUCTURE

Bedroom	Wake up; flashlight; movement and interaction.
Hallway	Comic clues; light tutorial; first creature encounter.
Storage Room	Key items and light-based puzzle.
Living Room	More panels and previous-attempt evidence.
Basement	Darker, dangerous encounters, major reveal.
Exit Area	Apparent escape followed by final clue.
Final Room	Comic sequence and repeating-cycle reveal.

THE LAST LIGHT — GAMEPLAY & DEVELOPMENT

6. COMPLETE GAMEPLAY FLOW

WAKE UP	FIND FLASHLIGHT	EXPLORE HOUSE
USE LIGHT	REVEAL COMIC CLUES	FIND ITEMS
CREATURE DETECTS LIGHT	HIDE / ESCAPE	SOLVE PUZZLES
DISCOVER PREVIOUS ATTEMPTS	REACH EXIT	FINAL COMIC REVEAL
TWIST: PLAYER HAS BEEN HERE BEFORE

7. SCOPE

- First-person movement and interaction
- Simple inventory, keys, and interactables
- Small interconnected house
- Sound effects and horror atmosphere
- Flashlight + limited battery system
- Light-based puzzles
- Hiding and chase sequences
- Final story twist
- One main creature / enemy
- Comic-style story panels
- Environmental storytelling
- Browser-playable HTML5 / Web build

The scope is intentionally small so a complete 10-15 minute experience can be finished within the jam.

8. DEVELOPMENT PLAN

Time	Development
Hour 0-12	Finalize concept; prototype movement, flashlight, and basic level.
Hour 12-40	Build house, puzzles, inventory, and creature.
Hour 40-70	Add Comic, Light, and Twist systems.
Hour 70-90	Story, sound, visuals, balancing, and polish.
Hour 90-100	Testing, bug fixing, and final submission.

9. THEME DEPENDENCY

LIGHT → controls exploration and survival. COMIC → communicates clues and story. TWIST → changes the meaning of the clues and story.

Removing any one of the three themes would significantly change the gameplay experience.

FINAL PITCH

The Last Light is a short horror escape game where the flashlight is both the player's greatest advantage and greatest danger. Through comic-style clues, the player slowly uncovers a disturbing truth: this is not their first escape attempt.

The game combines Comic, Light, and Twist into one simple, interactive horror experience designed to be understood quickly and remembered after a 10-15 minute playthrough.

LIGHT HELPS YOU SEE. • LIGHT HELPS YOU SOLVE. • LIGHT ALSO REVEALS YOU.
